Interlochen, Mich.—The idea that was impossible—a National music camp of talented boys and girls—has become one of Michigan's outstanding tourist attractions here at Interlochen, near Traverse City.

It is the only place of its kind in the United States—and, indeed, in the world.

Talk about the United Nations! Here is a representative UN right in Michigan with an enrollment this summer of young people not only from 42 of our 48 states plus the District of Columbia and the Canal Zone, but from the following foreign lands: Bolivia, Canada, Chile, Colombia, England and Peru. Here is a global Golden Rule.

Teeming with energy of youth from early dawn until lights-out at night, this camp is as fascinating as a bee hive in a clover field. Concerts are held in a lakeside bowl each Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. The admission charge is 60 cents. The final concert of the season will be presented Sunday, August 25, by an ensemble of approximately 1,000 performers.

Each Sunday at 11:15 a. m. a religious service is held. Then there are daily rehearsals at 8 a. m., 12:40, 1:30 and 4:30 p. m., which visitors are welcome to attend. On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at 8 o'clock are interesting demonstrations in music sight-reading—also free.

Started in 1927 with a modest short-term loan of $15,000, the National Music Camp has grown to a half-million-dollar investment of land, buildings and equipment. Enrollment has also climbed steadily, from 115 in 1927 to 1,900 in 1946.

An indebtedness of $30,000 in debentures, due in 1934, as prolonged ten years at reduced interest. Then in 1944 when the debentures were paid off, the entire debt was retired—thanks to a little guy by the name of James Caesar Petrillo.

Today the Michigan camp is enjoying its best season with an all-time high enrollment. A new auditorium, seating 1,600 people, will be ready for the 1947 season. The Kresge Foundation, financed by "five and ten" profits, is the donor. The Michigan Federation of Women's Clubs has contributed a fine arts building.

But how about Petrillo? What appeared at first to be a great misfortune—the loss of the national czar of the musicians' union—proved to be a lucky break for Interlochen.

Newspaper headlines carried the story far and wide of how one tyrant had forbidden radio broadcasters from carrying any program of music performed by students at the Michigan camp. The public became incensed. United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg sponsored action in Congress. Graduates and friends of the camp rallied to its defense. Contributions poured into the treasury—more than $40,000 in 1945.

Sensing the value of Interlochen as a tourist attraction, the Michigan State Legislature appropriated $8,000 each year to advertise the camp by natural color motion pictures and other methods.

Luncheon clubs everywhere began asking for these films which tell the story of an impossible idea—a national music camp for boys and girls.

Interlochen's fame spread thru-out the Nation. A weekly magazine ran a feature, illustrated with color photographs.

And so it went—a rising tide of favorable public opinion which prodded Congress to outlaw the Petrillo edict and which inspired new and greater gifts of usefulness for the Michigan enterprise.

The man behind the idea is a story.

James E. Maddy, in the despair of the professional public relations counsel.

J. Lee Barrett, Detroit's convention and tourist go-getter, once conceived the nifty notion of publicizing Maddy as a musical genius wearing a long flowing tie. Maddy snapped "Nonsense!" and continued to be the portrait of any boy's father—a chuckling, effervescent man who walks rapidly with a bouncing gait, talks incessantly about his life dream, and devotes every waking moment of his day to the boys and girls at Interlochen.

With his charming wife, Maddy holds receptions for students. He greets each one personally. His smile is infectious. It personifies the happy spirit of Interlochen—YOUTH!

Mail Carriers In City To Start September 1

According to James McDonnell, Grayling postmaster, a notification has been received by the Grayling Post Office from Washington informing them that their application for carrier mail service within the City of Grayling has been approved, and that the service is to start on September 1.

Postmaster McDonnell states there will be two deliveries each day, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. One regular mail carrier will be added to the post office roster of employees and one substitute carrier will be named. All parcel post will be delivered after the September date also, it is said.

Several steps must be taken by householders of Grayling to insure prompt and efficient delivery of mail to their homes. The house number must be clear and in a conspicuous place and each

NOTICE

Due to the inauguration of carrier mail service in the City of Grayling on September 1, it is absolutely essential that every Avalanche subscriber within the city drop in the office, phone or mail us your street name and number before that date. Once we have your street and number, your Avalanche will be delivered right to your own doorstep each Thursday morning.

There will be no increased charge in the subscription rates for this added service, as the mail rate to the Avalanche will be unchanged. September 1 would be a fine time for non-subscribers to start their subscription to the home town paper. Remember, from now on it will be delivered right at your door by Uncle Sam's mail carriers.

Don't forget to bring in that street name and number.

householder must place a mailbox at a convenient place near the front steps of their home. According to Postmaster McDonnell, it will be impossible to have home delivery of mail and still keep a box at the post office. Each person must choose one method or the other. Boxes will still be available at the post office for those who deem that system more advantageous.

The home delivery application was made by the local office on the recommendation of a postal inspector, who believed the city was now large enough for the step and due to the fact that well over 100 families were on the waiting list for boxes in the post office. Strikes at factories made it impossible for boxes to be obtained, and further than that, the local office thought of the most modern design and structure would have become crowded and cramped by the addition of 100 or more additional mail boxes.

The only change in rates for postage affected by the change in service will be on the local mail, which after September 1 will be 3c for a local letter. Postal cards mailed in the city will still be delivered for 1 cent, however.

Grayling Schools Approved Again

The Grayling School, all 12 grades, were again placed on the State Department of Public Instruction's approved list, according to a weekly news release from that department.

Also included in the news release was a story covering the state aid given to consolidated rural agricultural schools. The department paid out over $375,000 for maintenance and pupil transportation to such schools.

The article pointed out that rural agricultural schools should be organized in natural communities with single administrative units and from one to several attendance areas. The administrative unit should be sufficiently large to warrant provisions of the essential and desirable administrative and supervisory services. A school unit should have at least $3,000,000 of state equalized real property valuation except in those areas where population density and land valuations are relatively low. (The proposed unit with Beaver Creek and Grayling 1 would contain approximately $1,999,583 of state equalized real property.) Units of this type with school populations of at least 800, (the new proposed district had 643 students last year; a higher population is foreseen for this year) are enabled to provide for flexible and broader programs of instruction, including courses in such subjects as music, art, agriculture, homemaking and commerce.

It is important that farm people have a financial responsibility as well as representation in the administration of the schools attended by their children, the article continued. Only through

JULIUS NIELSEN LAID TO REST

Final, solemn rites were held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon for Julius Nielsen, 82, who died at his home last Thursday from a heart ailment of 20 months duration. He had been seriously ill for the past three weeks.

Born in Odense, Fyn, Denmark on August 23, 1863, he came to the United States at the age of 24 and settled in Iowa for two years before coming to Grayling in 1889. He was united in marriage to Miss Anne Marie Rasmussen on December 13, 1889, and the family have made their home here ever since.

Before a 23-year term as Grayling Street Commissioner, Mr. Nielsen was Crawford County Highway Commissioner for several years.

He was a charter member of the Portage Lake Land Co., a group of Scandinavian residents of Crawford County, who in 1904 purchased the piece of land now known as Danish Landing, on Lake Margrothe. He was a member of the Grayling Lutheran Church and belonged to the Danish Brotherhood since 1905.

Surviving, besides his widow, are three daughters, Miss Anna Nielsen of Grand Rapids, the Misses Olga and Margrethe Nielsen of Grayling; one son, Anthony, of Grayling; and three grandchildren.

Funeral services were held from the residence, 308-10nia street, the Rev. Svend Holm officiating, with interment in Elmwood Cemetery, Grayling.

Among those from out of town attending the rites for Mr. Nielsen were: From Grand Rapids—Miss Mabel Richmond; from Detroit, Michigan—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hemmingsen, Mr. and Mrs. Emory Mowbray, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Binnis; from Saginaw, Michigan—Mr. and Mrs. Axel Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Carl McGraw; from Bay City, Michigan—Frank Ryder; from Houghton Lake, Michigan—Miss Bessie Hanson, Carl Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Mielcherson; from East Jordan, Michigan—Mr. and Mrs. Joe Nemecek.

Local Man Figures In Wilds Drama

Little did Harry Matts of Linger Longer Club on the Ausable River near McMaster's Bridge realize when he left on his tenth trip to Rice Lake north of Sault Ste. Marie, Canada, that he would be a central figure in one of the most thrilling rescues of history before his return to Grayling.

But Matts did rescue Lieutenant Bill MacKenzie of St. Vital, Manitoba, who had been missing 28 days in the wilds of northern Canada after his jet plane was forced down by exhaustion of fuel on a film from Kapuskasing airport in Toronto.

Venturing out on Flack Lake early on the morning of July 25, Matts had a dandy strike, and after continuing on for a while, decided to return to shore. In an attempt to hook the fish which had first struck at his bait, this decision was what probably saved Lt. MacKenzie, for as Matts neared the shore he beheld a sight which he still can hardly believe—the figure of a man waving a piece of cloth and yelling in a croaking voice. Matts said, "The man, with his clothing nearly torn from his back, his toes sticking out of his boots, his face covered with whiskers and his hair waving in the early morning breeze, plunged into the lake, and I had to yell at him to wait on shore while I caught on."

"His face was all blistered, his lips cracked and his hands were covered with grime, and when he told me he was the missing jet pilot I could hardly believe it, as I couldn't see how he could have covered the miles he did."

With the weakened airman under his protection, Matts returned to a nearby lodge, and after eating and resting continued on to Laurentian Lodge, where the missing pilot was picked up by a plane.

In the meantime Lt. MacKenzie told his story to Matts. While flying his Gloucester Meteor jet plane about 20,000 feet above the northern wilds, his fuel ran out and he crash landed in the center of Helen Bar lake. He swam to shore, losing everything but his cigarette lighter on the way. Then followed 28 days of wandering until the morning he met Matts on the lake shore and was returned to civilization.

A sound program of school district reorganization and by living within the district in which their children are enrolled can farm people achieve this goal, the article concluded.

E. J. Olson spent the first of the week on business in Detroit.

Future Citizens of the County

Youngsters Halt Dangerous Blaze

There were two other Grayling heroes on the City Park Field last Sunday besides the baseball club. However, these two performed their heroic job without an appreciative audience.

After the large crowd had left the field at the end of the Grayling-Comins game, Dickie Kolka, 9, and Larry Kolka, 7, observed a large grass fire starting near the Bolinger Motel and Cabins. The two youngsters rushed to the scene, and, stripping off their shirts, beat out the fire with the shirts on the end of poles.

This action would lead one to believe that not all the younger generation is headed in the general direction of the "hot place."

Local Boy Hard At Work In Japan

With the Eighth Army in Japan (Delayed)—Technician 5th Grade Clifford D. Babbitt, 22-year-old husband of Mrs. Virginia Babbitt, Grayling, Michigan, is now serving overseas with the Company of the 127th Airborne Engineer Battalion of the 11th Airborne Division which is stationed in Sapporo, Hokkaido Island, Japan.

Babbitt was inducted into the Army at Fort Sheridan, Ill., on May 1, 1945, and after taking 17 weeks of basic military training and a short stay at home, he was sent overseas to help in the occupation in the newly defeated country of Japan. He arrived at the 4th Replacement Depot in Yokohama on October 29, 1945, and was assigned to the 11th Airborne Division after a short stay at the Replacement Depot.

Seven Game Law Violators Fined

Seven game and fish law violators were recently arrested and pleaded guilty in Justice Court before Justice Emil Giegling. All were apprehended by Conservation Officer Clarence Roberts.

Homer D. Bridahl of Manton paid a fine of $11.60 for fishing without a license, while Lynn Kestenholtz of Lansing paid the same fine and costs for having 16 brook trout in his possession. K. Saddler of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, paid $6.60 costs after pleading guilty to using three fishing lines at once. Three undervalued brook trout cost Nelson Nuffer of Bay City a $10 fine and costs of $6.60; Arthur Goetz of Dayton, Ohio, was fined $7 and costs of $6.60 for having 14 undervalued perch in his possession. Floyd Graham of Indianapolis, Indiana, paid a fine and costs of $11.60 for fishing without a license, while Alfred Cronkright of Saginaw was assessed the same amount for using a rifle for target practice without a license or permit.

COMPLETE PLANS OF V-J DAY CELEBRATION

Plans are nearing completion for a celebration here on August 14, which has been designated as Victory Day for World War II by Governor Harry Kelly.

The celebration of the ending of the greatest struggle in history will begin in Grayling with a parade starting from in front of the Legion Hall at 1 p. m. sharp next Wednesday afternoon. The parade is in charge of Clarence Johnson, who has been appointed marshal by the acting committee in charge of arrangements. The parade will be led by the Scottish Kiltie Band of the 34th Infantry of Detroit, and besides Grayling's veterans of the two wars, a battalion of Michigan State Troops from Camp Grayling will also march.

The line of march will be from the Legion Hall to Ionia Street, thence East on Ionia to Maple, then North on Maple to Michigan and back West on Michigan passing a reviewing stand on the Courthouse lawn, to Cedar St., where the colorful Victory parade will turn North to Peninsular, where the line of march will turn South back to the Courthouse, where the main address will be made by Colonel Arthur E. Brown, commanding the 34th Infantry of the Michigan State Troops.

HENRY SCOTT HIT BY CAR; INJURED

Henry Scott, of near Grayling, received serious compound fractures of the leg when he was hit by an automobile. The accident occurred at a point just below the last Friday night.

The car was driven by Elmer Jenks, 47, of Detroit, who stated that he did not see Scott until the moment of impact. His story was borne out by the four other passengers in the car.

Scott was rushed to the Mercy Hospital by Sorenson's ambulance where he is slowly improving. Following the taking of statements from Scott, Jenks and his passengers, Prosecuting Attorney Charles Moore found no cause for action against the driver.

Fire Destroys Bert Conter's Home

Fire destroyed a small house near Conter's Mill, south of Grayling, Tuesday afternoon. The house was occupied by Bert Conter and his son. The City Fire Department answered the call and halted the spread of flames, but was unable to save the house.

Stanford K. Jacobs of Indian River paid a $25 fine and court costs for kindling a fire in a wooded area and leaving it unquenched, according to Conservation Officer Clarence Roberts. The fire was started on July 31 and was still smoldering August 5, burning over 2 acres. The cost of extinguishing the fire is $125.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Doner are spending the week in Iron Mountain, where Mrs. Doner is attending the County Clerks Convention.

who gave their lives in the greatest war of all time which ended one year ago.

The parents of the following Crawford County heroes will be presented with the Gold Star certificates: Theon Clayton Decker, Lars Rasmussen, Harold C. Floerke, Charles E. Anthony, Thomas E. Ingalls, George Washington Ray, Milton Roy Gokee, George W. Roife, Paul Ostrander Jr., Adam E. Horning, Louis J. Irelan and Orville W. Murphy.

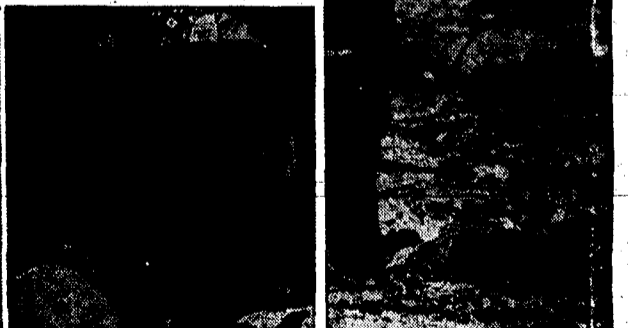

The part of the celebration to take place at the Courthouse is scheduled to get under way about 1:30 or 1:45. A non-schedule ball game between Grayling and another member team of the North Central Michigan Baseball League is to start about 3 p. m. as part of the day's activities.

Another feature of the day will be the formal opening of the newly constructed Legion Bar. The bar was informally opened to the members on July 31 while yet incomplete. By next Wednesday all work on the interior will have been completed, and the bar will be formally opened. The local Legion Post has elected Anthony Nelson, James Post and Robert Neafie as the house committee to operate the bar. The committee has appointed Charles Meisel as the Legion Bar manager. There will be two bartenders to operate the bar, which will be open to Legion members from noon until 2 a. m. The Legion building has been remodeled so that parties wishing to use other parts of the structure for meetings will be able to reach the rooms needed without entering or passing thru the bar room or lounge.

ARE HANDS MAGIC?

No. The surgeon's knife is skillful only because a highly-trained brain "magically" guides the hands.

American doctors gain their magical skill through post-graduate study, research, experimentation, and exchange of information in their medical organizations.

American doctors continually study medicine because, under the American system of private practice, their success depends upon giving satisfaction to the patient (that's you).

One of the dangers of foreign systems of compulsory socialized medicine is that the doctor's success may depend upon his political connections—not his healing skill. His "post-graduate study" will be in politics—not in medicine.

The public (that's you) pays the bill under either system except that under compulsory socialization something new is added—the high cost of political administration.

The better way to protect yourself against hospital cost and serious illness expense is to join voluntary group hospital and medical insurance plans and to urge your congressman to support legislation that provides for better facilities for medical care.

Steel and You . . .

As a man put a nickel in a pinball machine, a friend remarked, "You better save that nickel to buy a brick for the house you are building." He replied, "It isn't brick I am worrying about, it is nails. I can't buy them at any price." And thereby hangs a tale.

Little did the average citizen realize how adversely a strike against the steel industry would affect him. He is finding out now as shortages strike home. He is becoming aware of the need of labor legislation that will outlaw the stoppages of vital industries as a means of negotiating wage contracts. Anyone desirous of building a new home, buying a new auto, purchasing new equipment made of steel, or harvesting farm crops, is feeling the effect of the shortage of steel caused by unnecessary strikes.

The situation is an indictment of the intelligence of our lawmakers and labor leaders. The loss and inconvenience they have caused the nation is incalculable.

There was practically no steel made during part of January and most of February of this year. Taking 1937 as an average, the figures show that while steel production is now 40 percent above that point, and gross income is 60 percent higher, payrolls are up over 100 percent while earnings on investment are 30 percent below 1937. Even though you are not a stockholder in the steel industry, these figures show that as a farmer, manufacturer, or home owner, you may have a much greater interest in it than many of its stockholders. Anything that interferes with steel production interferes with your own personal and business operations. That is why we must have labor legislation that, while fair to labor and industry, will protect the public from abuses of power by either labor or capital.

JOBS FOR TB "CURES"

Not many years ago, tuberculosis was commonly called consumption, the "wasting" disease. Novels, plays and even operas were written about lovely heroines whose lives were slowly being worn away as a result of this disease.

Today a great deal more is known about tuberculosis than was known at the beginning of the century. Tuberculosis can be cured, particularly if it is discovered early, and it can be discovered before outward symptoms appear by chest X-rays. Knowing much of the nature of the disease, its victim is not necessarily doomed. The person who has had tuberculosis can return to useful, satisfying occupations when treatment has been completed. The only safe treatment is rest, complete bed rest, which is best obtained in a hospital for the tuberculous.

When the patient receives his medical discharge from the hospital as "cured"—or, as the doctors prefer to say, "an arrested case"—there is no reason why he should not seek employment in an occupation which appeals to him so long as it does not require strenuous manual labor.

Many employers are eager to hire former TB patients because experience has shown they are, as a rule, good employees. But some employers still believe such persons are poor health risks. Actually, the former TB patient is usually a good health risk. While in the hospital he has learned how to protect his health and is able to avoid many of the common illnesses to which other people fall victim from time to time.

And the fact that he once had tuberculosis does not mean that he may be endangering the health of his associates. While tuberculosis is a communicable disease and people catch it from people who have an active case, an arrested case can not transmit the disease to others. While physicians advise former tuberculous patients against accepting employment which requires great physical exertion, it is not dangerous for them to take other types of work. High blood pressure will be discussed in the next column. (This article is presented by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association in the interest of better health.)

The program will incorporate many of the popular attractions of last year, but Chairman Kays is anxious to offer something new in the way of outdoor sports. Anyone who has an idea or an act that will add to the program is invited to offer it in writing or in person to the Executive Committee, Sportmen's Show, Petoskey, Michigan. time. By tomorrow she would have forgotten it. Already the fact that she had been powerless to escape it was making her ashamed of herself, and glad to ignore such absurdity. The air was growing chilly. The children should have come in from the pool by now, and she hoped they had hung up their suits properly. It was about time she went downstairs and got out the cocktail tray to have it ready when Spratt came in. The telephone rang again, and when she answered it she felt pleasure at the normal steadiness of her voice. Her caller greeted her cheerfully. "This is Irene Stern, Elizabeth. How are you?" "Fine, never better."

"And Spratt?" "Working himself to death and flourishing on it." "Any news on the picture, or do I dare ask?" "Good news, I hope. Anyway, a new writer who seems to have ideas."

"Anybody I know?" "I don't think so. He's just off the boat." "Oh dear. Spikka da Ingla?" "Fairly well, I believe. They're better at languages than we are." "They should be, can't you a hundred miles over there without needing a new one. Elizabeth, I called to ask if it's all right for Brian to stay for dinner with Peter."

"Irene, you're an angel about that child, but are you sure it's no trouble? Brian takes half his meals with you as it is." "It's no trouble and I wish you'd let him stay. He and Peter are upstairs getting starchy-eyed over a new collection of bugs—Elizabeth, is it really necessary for the Scouts to encourage such a fearful interest in natural history? Peter does nothing these days but mount insects."

"I know, Brian's room looks like all I've ever heard about delirium tremens. There's nothing we can do about it." "It must be a recent craze," said Irene Stern. "I remember Jimmy—" she was referring to her older son—"he was an enthusiastic Scout, but he never had this passion for creeping things."

Elizabeth began to laugh. "You'd better send Brian home, Irene. He'll be a distressing influence on Peter." "But when they're mounting bugs together they're so happy. I can't bear to separate them. So let him stay for dinner, Elizabeth. We'll bring him home by nine."

"All right," she said, "thank you for being so good to him. It's been ages since I've seen you—I'm going to ring you one day this week for lunch."

But she had waked from it. Like its predecessors, this portrait of a woman had been as abruptly as it had come. Elizabeth pushed a look of half off her forehead and reached for a cigarette. "What a fool I am," she said, her eyes on the picture of Spratt that was standing on her desk. She had a picture of Arthur packed away somewhere in the back of a closet, but it had been years since she had looked at it. She wanted Spratt there. Spratt whom she loved, her children's father. Spratt and her children were what she lived for. They filled up her thoughts—except for these rare minutes of agony, minutes that were more cruel because they had to be borne in silence. She could tell Spratt anything on earth but this. She could mention Arthur to him without self-consciousness, never in the past. There was a man like Mr. So-and-so in the company Arthur worked for in Tulsa, one of those pseudo-intellectuals who bought first editions for no reason but to show them off. I remember one day Arthur said he...

As simply as that. And they would chuckle over Arthur's wise-crack and go on talking. But no matter how seldom they occurred, she could not tell Spratt that there ever did occur such experiences of black anguish as the one she had just passed through.

And why in the world should she, Elizabeth asked herself now. It was over, gone completely until the next time, if there ever should be a next time.

WARREN L. HELTZEL,

for the conversation seemed to consist less of words than of laughter. Not wanting to interrupt whatever it was they were enjoying so much, Elizabeth sat down in a deck-chair on the balcony to wait for the appearance of Spratt's car in the driveway.

The shadows of the lemon trees were like dark lace shawls lying on the grass. A little wind ruffled the surface of the pool and moved gently past her, bringing odors of damp grass, lemon blossoms, torn geranium leaves. The air was full of the twittering of birds making farewell to the sun as joyfully as the children were laughing within.

Elizabeth leaned back, wrapped in a warm glow of pleasure. What a lucky woman she was, she reflected, and how much she had—a beautiful home, a husband who loved her, such charming, happy children. In the midst of all this, how foolish it was ever to remember anything else. It was good to have a few minutes alone, like this, to look at all of it and know she had a right to be proud because she had created it; good to take pleasure in her children's laughter and know they were so happy because of the love and security she had given them. No matter what might happen to them in the coming years they would have this to remember.

She found herself laughing too, in echo of the four mirthful youngsters in the den. They were reading something, for she could hear the rustle of pages—no doubt those dusty old magazines they had brought in from Julia's mother's attic—and their voices came through the window to her, breathless with merriment.

"Irene, you're an angel about that child, but are you sure it's no trouble? Brian takes half his meals with you as it is." "It's no trouble and I wish you'd let him stay. He and Peter are upstairs getting starchy-eyed over a new collection of bugs—Elizabeth, is it really necessary for the Scouts to encourage such a fearful interest in natural history? Peter does nothing these days but mount insects."

"I know, Brian's room looks like all I've ever heard about delirium tremens. There's nothing we can do about it." "It must be a recent craze," said Irene Stern. "I remember Jimmy—" she was referring to her older son—"he was an enthusiastic Scout, but he never had this passion for creeping things."

Elizabeth began to laugh. "You'd better send Brian home, Irene. He'll be a distressing influence on Peter." "But when they're mounting bugs together they're so happy. I can't bear to separate them. So let him stay for dinner, Elizabeth. We'll bring him home by nine."

"All right," she said, "thank you for being so good to him. It's been ages since I've seen you—I'm going to ring you one day this week for lunch."

What a lucky woman she was, she reflected. "Go on, Cherry." It was Dick speaking—"What have you got now? Read it." "This one's wonderful," exclaimed Cherry. "Listen." She read, grandiloquently. "In these days of bitter strife, when the earth shakes with the force of battle, a new future is being born. We make sacrifices gladly, for we know we shall be richly repaid with the glory of universal brotherhood. The world must be made safe for democracy! In this magnificent hour—" Another shout of laughter interrupted her. Cherry announced: "That's an advertisement for raisins!" "I don't believe it," said Pudge. "It certainly is, here's a picture of a loaf of raisin bread to go with it."

"I bet every one of 'em's in the army now," said Dick. "Take a peek at this. A picture of a lot of soldiers ready to go abroad, and the line under it says, 'A payment on our debt to France.'"

"Any time France feels like making a payment on their debt to us," said Cherry. "I'm agreeable." There was another sound of rustling pages, and she burst out laughing again. "Listen, everybody. One of our greatest aims in this war is the reconstruction of Europe on such a basis that future holocausts like this one will be impossible. Out of the world's anguish must be born a new Germany, a nation in which democracy shall rule, where no tyrant and no group of bloodthirsty lunatics shall ever again have the power to plunge a whole continent—" The rest of her words were lost in a confusion of laughter.

"For the love of Pete," murmured Pudge, incredulously. "It's right here in print, only you didn't let me finish and the last sentence is the funniest of all. 'Germany will be defeated, but their defeat will bring the German people one tremendous boon: a new man for them the complete and final overthrow of autocratic government.' How do you like that?"

"I get it," said Pudge. "We were just fighting the Germans for their own good, were we? Gee, when they look around they must be so grateful." "I see by this paper," said Julia, "that the International Sunday School convention planned for 1916 has just been called off because the delegates are too busy shooting each other to attend this year."

"Where were they going to hold it?" asked Cherry. "Don't look now, dear, in Japan." They began to laugh again. Pudge exclaimed, "Be quiet and let me read you something funnier than that. These editorials about the first air raid on an open city. It seems the Germans had things called Zeppelins—that's a kind of blimp—and they sent some of these Zeppelins over Antwerp and dropped a few bombs, and here's what the American papers were saying about it."

"They're all wrong," Pudge continued reading with mock horror. "This is not only contrary to the laws of war, but can serve no legitimate military purpose—" "What is a legitimate military purpose?" Dick inquired, "unless it is to kill everybody you can?" "Shut up and let me read this. As those who were killed or injured by the bombs were women and male non-combatants, the airship attack was nothing but a plain act of savagery. This is not war, but murder!"

"Did you ever hear anything so naive?" asked Cherry. "Was that first attack a bad one?" asked Dick. "I was saying that for the last," answered Pudge. "If you can believe it, that first air raid, that dastardly, bloodthirsty, savage raid that made everybody all black and yell with horror—that raid killed ten people and wounded eleven."

"Holy smoke!" exclaimed Dick, and the others joined in his derision. A moment later Dick added, "Here's a swell side angle on the air raids. It says the men in London were taking to wearing pajamas instead of nightgowns because when the blimps came over everybody ran out into the streets, and they wanted the neighbors to see them running around in something more becoming to British dignity than night-shirts."

They chuckled joyfully. Cherry exclaimed, "I wish you'd look at these recipes for war-meats—'Freedom Meat Loaf,' made out of peanuts and cornmeal." "Peanuts do have Vitamin B in them," suggested Julia. "They'd never heard of Vitamin B," Dick said scornfully. "They had to eat peanuts and call 'em meat because our brave allies were buying up all the meat with the money they borrowed and didn't pay back and never did intend to pay back. Do look at that headline. 'Every housewife who saves meat and flour in her home is bringing nearer the day of universal democracy.'"

"Do you suppose they really believed all that?" Cherry asked in wonder. Outside, on the balcony, Elizabeth lifted her hands from the arms of the chair and saw that each of the bright blue cushions was stained with a round spot of dampness where she had gripped them. On the other side of the window the children made some fresh discovery and went off into another peal of laughter, gay, mocking, and terrible because it was so utterly innocent. Elizabeth stood up, her muscles tense with impulse. Then she stopped standing motionless because she did not know what the impulse was. To do something to them—but what? She could not walk in upon them white with anger and cry out, "Yes, we believed it! You inhuman young wretches, we believed it!"

She could not say that because they were not inhuman, and they were not wretches; they were young and well-bred and intelligent, and they would hear her with a pained bewilderment, and answer with the cool logic of their years. "Aren't you ashamed that you did, when you look at the world we're living in?" (TO BE CONTINUED)
